A Helping Hand

by xx_Katastrophe

Summary

Still ill, Nathalie finds herself needing a bit of assistance while showering... and Gabriel helps out. Well, kind of.

Nathalie had been stuck in bed quite a while, and at this point, she felt like she needed a shower. It's been rather hard, as it seems like her dizzy spells keep happening frequently and making it hard to move, let alone get up to shower alone. She was feeling alright now, so she decided to take advantage of the moment. Gabriel was presently in her bedroom, checking in on her as he usually does. "Well, now that I feel up to it, I believe I'm going to take a shower."

"Alone? I'm sorry, I simply can't allow that to happen." He replied sternly.

"Gabriel, do you really think I can't take a shower by myself? You bought me a very nice shower bench to help with that. I think I can manage. Now if you excuse me..." Nathalie huffed, as she slowly swung her legs over the edge of the bed. She pulled herself to her feet, but then after a few seconds, she fell back down. She put a hand to her head as she closed her eyes.

"Look at you, Nathalie, you keep getting dizzy. What happens if you slip and fall? What if you receive a head injury? I can't let you do that to yourself… who knows how a concussion would affect your sickness..." Gabriel placed a hand on her shoulder. She looked at him, her cheeks already blazing.

"Okay, fine. But you are not to touch or enter the shower with me. You will be sitting just outside the shower stall, and only assisting me when I ask you. Understand?" She spoke firmly.

He nodded, as he helped her up. His arm curled around her waist as he supported her. "Of course. This will only be to make sure that nothing bad happens to you." Together, they slowly walked to the bathroom. Once in the bathroom and the door was closed, Nathalie began to undress, albeit slowly as she still felt slightly awkward undressing around him. This wasn't the first time he's seen her undress, as he had helped her previously when she was even more ill and definitely didn't have the strength to get herself ready. Her illness wiped any shame she had of others seeing her naked, especially him, since he would be the most frequent person to help her. She wasn't sure why, though- surely he had more important things to do than to help her. Gabriel awkwardly turned his head away, chewing on his lower lip to hopefully ease thoughts he shouldn't be thinking. He certainly shouldn't be looking at her the way he does, but he couldn't help it. Nathalie was extremely attractive, with and without her clothes.

Once she was fully undressed and her hair down and brushed out, she stepped into the shower and turned on the water. The feeling of the warm water coursing over her body caused her muscles to relax, and her head to clear. The permanent mental fog that loomed seemed to melt away, even just for a moment- she almost felt like her old self momentarily. She bent down to pick up her shampoo, but straightened out far too quickly. Overcome with a wave of dizziness, she sat herself down on the bench in the shower. He perked up at the sound of her dropping her shampoo bottle. “Nathalie, are you alright?”

“Yes, I’m okay… but my legs feel weak.” She mumbled as she closed her eyes. She hung her head.

“Do you need me to help?”

“No!” She blurted out, “I mean... No thank you. I’m okay…” She tried reaching for the shampoo bottle, but struggling.

“Are you sure you don’t need help?”

Realizing she probably wouldn’t be able to reach it anyway, she exhaled. “Actually, yes. I can’t reach the shampoo bottle. Can you help me get it?”

“Of course, you know, maybe I should come in there, just in case you need more help…” He commented to himself. She could hear the sound of clothes rustling and then falling to the floor. The shower door opened and Gabriel stepped in. He was sure to close the door behind him, as he leaned down to pick up the shampoo bottle for her. “Here you are, Nathalie… say, you look quite flushed. Are you feeling alright? Are you running another fever?”

Nathalie hadn’t even realized her cheeks were nearly the same color as her rebellious red streak. “What? Me? Oh, I’m fine… Honestly.” She responded, taking the shampoo bottle and squirting some into her palm. She worked it into a lather as she massaged it into her hair. Her hands seemed to be shaking some.

Gabriel came in closer to her and placed a hand to her forehead and cheek. “Oh, your face feels hot. Maybe we should hurry this up.”

“N-no no, I’m okay. But you’re right, you’re hot.”

Completely caught off guard, he responded, “Excuse me?”

“I-I mean… I’m hot! You’re right, maybe turn down the water temperature?” Nathalie hoped he didn’t hear her Freudian slip.

He complied, turning the knob to the right some. The water flowing out was cooler now. The change in temperature caused her to shiver now. Gabriel frowned as he approached her. “Is that too cold?”

“Not at all…” She uttered between clenched teeth. He instead went to hug her in an attempt to warm her up. It’s worked before… So why not now? Awkwardly, Nathalie returned the hug, feeling her stiff nipples pressed to his chest as he hugged her. He turned up the temperature a little, and that helped as well.

“My apologies about that. Do you mind if I have a seat?”

“It’s alright. Be my guest.” She scooted over, allowing him to sit next to her. They sat alone in awkward silence for a moment, before he looked over to her.

“So… when you said I was hot earlier… Did you mean that?”

She looked away from him and cleared her throat. “Well, um… yes.”

“Really?”

“Yes, really. The truth is, Gabriel… I really like you. You mean everything to me.”

It was Gabriel’s turn to blush now. “And… you mean everything to me, Nathalie. You’re the most incredible woman I know, and I am grateful everyday that you’re in my life.” He took her hand.

“Do you mean that… or are you saying that because you feel pity for me?” She asked skeptically.

“I mean it. Truly… honestly…” He leaned in closer and closer… until he sealed his statements with a kiss. It didn’t take long for her to completely melt into him. She squeezed his hand, and slowly felt herself gravitating to him. As their embrace continued, she found herself in his lap, straddling him. Her arms wrapped around his neck as they pulled away from each other. They gazed into each other’s eyes. Her eyes widened a little as she suddenly felt something brushing up against her inner thigh. “Ah… my apologies, Nathalie. Maybe this isn’t such a good idea given your—“

“I want you.”

“Wh…what?”

“I want you so bad, Gabriel. Please, ravish me.”

“But what about--”

She put a finger to his lips, pressing her hips against him. She began to rock her hips against him, slowly grinding into him. In response, he pushed against her and mimicked her motions. He took a hold of her hips, giving her a firm squeeze with both hands. Her finger withdrew as her hands held his face. She smirked, and pressed her forehead to his. She took the initiative to plant a kiss on his lips. A hand released from her hip, slipping it between her legs. Two of his fingers delicately traced along the sensitive skin of her folds, drawing a shiver from her. He leaned into her, his lips now ghosting across her neck and then down to her collarbone. Quickly, he pulled his hand away from between her legs, and instead, used it to grab a hold of his mostly-hardened cock. The tip was pressed flushed to her nether lips. Without skipping a beat, she slowly sank down on him, biting on her lower lip. From his lips, a soft moan escaped, his fingers digging into her flesh.

She immediately started riding him, already beginning at a moderate pace. He thrusted up into her, his back arching slightly as he let out a low groan. With a soft hum, he leaned into her chest, placing some kisses along her breasts. She shivered again, driving her to move herself faster along his length. Her hand found its way to the back of his head, threading her fingers between the longer parts of his silver locks. With that, she held him close, as his tongue then ran over her nipple. Her breath hitched, before her breathing became labored. His thrusts became rougher, causing her to let out a moan. The sounds of skin on skin, heavy breathing and moaning echoed through the bathroom.

Gabriel panted as he pulled away from her breast. Using his other hand, he gently pinched the other nipple between his thumb and middle finger. Nathalie arched her back as she moaned louder. Her hips moved faster in response, her hands on his shoulders holding him tighter. Her nails digging into his skin caused him to tense, and in response, to slam his hips up into her.

“I… think I’m going to cum…” Nathalie said under her breath, the lightheaded feeling slowly creeping over her.

“Then please cum for me, my Nathalie… I would love nothing more.” He responded between breaths. He smiled at her, which she could only half-see without her glasses, but she smiled back. Soon her orgasm washed over her, leaning her head back as her legs trembled. Her breaths increased in rate, as the dizziness overwhelmed her. She hung her head, as he pulled her close to his chest again. She was slowly descending from her peak, curled up to him as the lightheaded feeling slowly subsided.

He slowly pulled himself out of her, close to his own orgasm. Her hand wrapped around his shaft as she began to stroke him quickly. She swept him into yet another smooch, as he bucked his hips up into her hand. Without warning, ropes of cum came out, covering her hand and accidentally getting on his stomach. She released her grip, allowing the water to clean up the mess on her hand. She pulled away from him, the pair gazing into each other’s eyes with soft smiles.

“This shower bench is quite sturdy, hm?” She mused.

“Only the finest for you. You’re worth it.”

“Oh, please… I’m definitely not.”

“Well, I think you are… and that settles that.” He responded. “We should clean up. I believe the hot water is starting to run out…” She nodded, as the two of them scrambled to clean up. Once they were sufficiently clean, Gabriel turned off the water. He stepped out to retrieve some towels. She tried to stand up, but her legs felt weak, and she immediately sat down on the bench. He came back, and handed her a towel. She began to dry herself off, wrapping the towel around her body. He extended a hand out to her, and helped her up. “How are you feeling, Nathalie?”

“My legs feel weak… and I feel slightly dizzy, but I’m not sure if it’s from the sickness or from… ahem, what we just did.” She took his hand, and stepped out of the shower.

He frowned with a towel wrapped around his waist now. He quickly picked her up off her feet. “Let’s get you to bed, then… you need rest. You may have overdone it. I shouldn’t have done that.”

“Gabriel, it’s fine. I pushed myself to do this. It’s my own fault. I promise I’ll be okay.”

“If you insist…” He sighed. “...If this is to happen again… we're in bed. It would be too risky in a shower. ”

She nodded quietly, leaning her head against his chest as he carried her back into her bedroom.
