First Time

by Erseac

Summary

You’d been sucking him off for years, and had neither dreaded nor dreamed of the day he might want more. You prepared for it. It was your duty, and that was all. The pleasure of a job well done outweighed whatever your treacherous body might scream.

And yet, it still came as a shock when he finally said,

“That won’t do today, Nathalie. Take off your pants and bend over the desk.”

You tried your best to be good for him. But how could you give him your all, when you couldn't stop thinking about me?

Your first time happened six months after I died. Oh, of course first time is relative, silly. You'd been sucking him off for years before that. And you'd been brought to tears and screams more times than you could count, but that was in my bed, not his. All fun and games. But when someone says you popped your cherry, lost your virginity, that's not what they mean, is it, darling? Everything up to this point was just playing around. It did not count, not really. At least not for you.

I never imagined you might still be a virgin, honestly, and neither did he. But then, time has a way of making fools of us all. Back then, we still thought you were just an archeology student from a rich family. All that council business, the _Shadow_ of the _Diamond_ sent by the _Wheat_, oh my. Surprised that I know? Don't be, my dear. You can't keep secrets from a dead woman.

And then it was only you and him, and the boy of course, and for a while, there was nothing happening at all. He was mad with grief, and for all you knew he had forgotten all about the little secrets this house held, in favour of his new, big one.

Grief does terrible things to a mind, and he has a mind like no other. Still, a body cannot be denied forever. After three months he pushed you to your knees again, and you felt relief. An old familiar ritual, like so many times before. Open his fly, get out his penis. You were always so hesitant to call it a dick or a cock or his meat or whatever. Or was that just because I was the one asking?

A kiss on the tip, then licking. Finally, taking it into your mouth. Down your throat. Then you got to do very little at all while he used you as he wanted. Swallow, making sure no drop gets on the carpet. Clean him up, then leave to reapply your makeup.

You had neither dreaded nor dreamed of the day he might want more. You prepared for it. It was your duty, and that was all. The pleasure of a job well done outweighed whatever your treacherous body might scream.

And yet, it still came as a shock when he finally said,

"That won't do today, Nathalie. Take off your pants and lean over the desk."

He wasn't asking. You both knew he didn't need to. You also knew you had no idea what you'd have said if he had. No, wait, that's not quite right, is it? It was clear what you'd have said, just not whether it would have been a lie. What was it that you actually wanted? You couldn't recall the last time someone asked you.

Instead you wondered about shoes. They had to come off for the pants to go, of course. But wouldn't it be better to put them back on, to get your ass closer to the height of his crotch? No, that would take time, and his was too valuable. You'd make do.

At least you didn't have to wonder whether he wanted you on your stomach or your back. He never looked you in the eyes while using you before. Why would he start now?

A quick glance back confirmed that he was impatiently removing his pants as well. Of course there was nothing like lube to be seen. That was fine. You were a little wet, probably, that would have to be enough.

You knew he could pamper a woman for hours, eat her out until she screamed, then make gentle love until the morning came. You knew this because I'd told you. There were even times when you'd seen. Important phone calls came at any time of the day and night, after all, and sometimes, you got a little curious, didn't you? No, it was fine, don't worry. I always loved performing for an audience.

But all that wasn't for you, I'm afraid; only for me. I'm sorry darling, I truly am, but it just wouldn't be proper, you know? There are expectations that come with being a genius, and a genius's wife, and a genius's secretary, and in the end, aren't we all slaves to that? You had no choice in your role, but if you really think about it, ignore the youthful upperclass shenanigans, neither did he and I, not really. There could be never be any way but his way.

Of course, you didn't have to actually believe all that; you just had to make it part of your soul. Feel it in your bones. That would make the next part easier.

His hands on your ass. Something was at your slit. The next moment, he pushed in.

You tried to modulate your scream until it sounded like a moan. It was good enough for him.

A moment's respite would have been great, some time to adjust. But a genius is always busy. Time is money, but time is also time, time to find a cure, find magical jewellery, time to bring me back. That's what you said to yourself as he pulled out, almost completely, and then immediately pushed back in, hard and fast and barely any less bracing the second time. And the third. And fourth. And so on.

You had no experience, but you had education. The Diamond's Shadow was expected to do whatever the Diamond needed, after all, which might include giving up her virginity. So while you kept it intact, prepared, just like your muscles, your reflexes, your weight and any other part of your body he might need for work or pleasure, you read up on the theory. Watched videos. You knew exactly what to do.

And none of it mattered. It didn't take an education in archeology, business and espionage to know that he wasn't making love, he was fucking you. Pure and raw and brutally.

There was a moment where his right hand moved, around you, towards your crotch, through your hairs that you should really trim, right up until- No. He stopped before reaching your clit. A second later, the hand was gone.

"I got reminded…", he began, and it was obvious of what and of who and why he'd stopped. This was the closest to an apology you'd get, and it was for the one thing you hoped he'd do, the one thing that might have brought you a bit of relief. You forgave him anyway. After all, you weren't his lover. You were not even his plaything, his pet, like you were mine. You were his assistant, his note-taker, his organiser, his problem-solver, and sometimes that meant being a convenient hole. Two now, in fact. You had better get yourself some lube and plugs; prepare in case he ever wanted to make it three.

He briefly pawed at your breasts; ineffectually, with the blouse in the way. Why he hadn't told you to get all the way naked you couldn't say. Obviously you'd have done it. He had seen you naked before, after all; duty didn't stop just because you were taking a shower. And while you were hardly a model, he had still tailored everything you wore. There was no part of you where his hands hadn't been before. But today was not the day he was going to put this all together; this would have been weird, unusual, inappropriate—in short, intimate. A second later, his hands went back to your ass, your only connection at your crotches, as it was meant to be.

As he grew louder and even more aggressive, you tried to moan right along, while a new complication came up. You knew there had been no condom in this room, because it would have been your job to put it there. And you also knew from hours sleeping next to him and me while we were trying to make a child that he was getting close fast. Time was money after all. But he made no moves to pull out.

And why would he? It avoided long cleanup, and he probably thought you were on the pill. You had been, but it had run out months ago, and with the funeral and the lair, you didn't have time to get a refill, let alone get an IUD.

No, that was a lie. You could have squeezed it in if you'd been a bit more efficient elsewhere. In reality you thought this part of your job was over, didn't you? How lazy and selfish of you. No, it is fine, I'm not mad. Just a bit disappointed, my dear. You used to be so good at all this, and he really needed you to be on top of your game right now, don't you know?

Time to mentally rearrange your schedule for tomorrow. You could probably get the morning after pill early in the day, hiding the side-effects until the night. An appointment at a gynaecologist's clinic would be more challenging, but cash greases all wheels, and you could expense this in a way that wouldn't make him suspicious. What? Make him pull out instead? Oh, what a funny joke, my dear! He was a genius. It would not do to force him to think about your personal little problems.

As he went, you felt the tension in your body rise. He might have decided to forgo finesse, but getting railed on your own desk was objectively hot no matter what. Wasn't it exciting, exhilarating even? He'd picked you, despite all the options. Even now, after so much had happened, he still trusted you and only you with this. Despite many offers, he had never touched any of his models; you knew for sure once more because it would have been your job to deal with the fallout. You also knew that one day, maybe not today, once the soreness had passed, you'd lie awake at night, rubbing yourself to the memory. Just like you used to after I had played with you.

Still, he was getting close and you were absolutely not there yet. Time to fake things.

Luckily, you had an example to copy off. Me, when I was playing with you, and you were eating me out. I always told him you were better, and you that he was better. Just a little joke, to keep your on toes, you know? But you still remembered the sounds, and you repeated them, in your voice, a bit quieter, hoping that he wouldn't notice the resemblance.

As far as he knew, you came as he nutted inside you.

I do love that word, nutting. So adorable, so ridiculous. The act has all the gravitas we put into it and no more. And you couldn't deny that parts of this were right at the ridiculous end. Besides, what else should you call it? He certainly wasn't going to _breed_ you, like he did me. It was your job to make sure of that, with protection, the morning after pill, and if you were really bad at it, the _Loi Veil_.

He didn't stay inside you for long; just barely until he started to soften, or perhaps realise what he had done. That was fine. Time for you to start the clean up. Him first, of course; his time was valuable, after all. Also, that way you could hopefully hide the bit of blood that you left on him. This was not a discussion you were at all interested in having.

"All done, sir", you said as you finished, and he pulled up his pants again. Just like always. Except today, you were desperately trying to close your legs, making sure his sperm didn't land on the carpet. He did not notice, or maybe he didn't care. As usual, he didn't meet your eye as he said,

"Thank you Nathalie, that is all. Very good."

It was almost as nonchalant as usual, a tiny quiver the only sign that a line had been crossed. You know it was only a matter of time before it would be perfectly natural for him, and you as well.

"Of course, sir", you said demurely. "Any time."

He nodded, as if that was most normal thing to say in the world. Maybe it was, for you two. Without another word, he left, leaving you to clean yourself up. Tissues could do something to get rid of the worst mess, but you knew it wasn't quite enough. You put on your panties and your pants, still feeling sticky, but what else was there to do?

It was an awkward walk to your bathroom, feeling sweaty and like his cum was still leaking out of you. Thankfully nobody spotted you in the big house; doing business like this was not to your liking. You knew you'd have to, eventually, of course. It was not like you hadn't signed for parcels and taken phone calls while his cum was dripping down your throat before.

For now, though, you just made it to the shower and got naked, the thing he hadn't needed or wanted earlier. Was he doing similar things? Unlikely. You had done good work with the tissues.

The warm water hit your skin, and you started to wash away all the sweat and bodily fluids. Alone, of course, and why wouldn't you be? It was all just business, all just sweat to wash away. Purely physical. There was no reason to think about it further.

And yet, when the water hit just right, and you let out a real moan, the thoughts kept coming back, and so did the tension. But it was not his face that filled your mind. As you fingered yourself, you wondered how your first time could have gone, had I been there. Slow and sensual, looking in your eyes. Maybe in the camps in Tibet, or the bed here. He wouldn't kiss you, most likely, but he'd kiss me and I'd kiss you and wasn't that the same thing, basically? Or maybe I'd have sat on your face while he plowed into you, him and me making out while you acted as little more than a mattress. You'd have liked that, I know it.

It took shockingly little for you to come. You decided to credit him for this, of course. If I had been there as well, taking care of you, you'd have probably orgasmed before him.

In the end, as you came down from your high and your fantasies, you concluded that this had gone as well as it could have, given the circumstances. He had given you as much as he could afford, busy genius that he was, and what he had given you had been as much as you dared need. It was fine. Maybe you should start wearing a skirt, make it easier for him the next time.

But try as you might, your thoughts kept coming back to me. My soft tits, my brilliant smile, my gentle touch. And you started to ask yourself: If I was here, how would I describe what just happened?
