So It Goes…

by Anonymous

Summary

Paris most iconic couple (and supervillains) have their own heated moments.

Chapter 1

In the office, the afternoon sun casted long shadows across the glass desk. Nathalie now stood before that desk with Gabriel seated in his leather chair watching her with those intense grey eyes that made her stomach flip.

She'd come to his office to discuss the spring collection schedule. But the moment she'd walked through the door, Gabriel had loosened his tie with deliberate slowness and told her to close the blinds.

"Someone might—"

"Close the blinds, Nathalie."

Her hands had trembled as she'd obeyed. God help her, she'd been wet before she'd even finished the task.

Now she stood before him in her pencil skirt and silk blouse, dressed like the professional assistant she'd been for over a decade. Except was now her husband. And the way he was looking at her made it clear he had no interest in discussing fabric swatches or runway models.

"Take off your blazer."

She unbuttoned the tailored blazer, letting it slide from her shoulders. Gabriel held out his hand, and she placed it there, watching him drape it over the back of a chair.

"Your blouse."

Her fingers found the buttons, working them one by one down the front. She took her time because she knew he liked to watch. Each button revealed another inch of pale skin, another glimpse of the black lace bra underneath. When the last button came free, she let the blouse hang open, waiting for his next instruction.

Gabriel didn't speak. He simply gestured with one finger to turn around.

She turned to face the windows, the city sprawled below them. Behind her, she heard him stand, heard the soft rustle of his suit as he moved closer. His hands came to rest on her hips, his thumbs tracing the edge of her skirt where it met her waist.

"You walked into my office wearing this," he murmured against her ear. "This skirt that hugs every curve. This blouse that I can see right through when the light hits it correctly. Did you think I wouldn't notice?"

"I hoped you would."

His grip tightened. "You hoped I would what?"

"I hoped you would do something about it, sir."

A low sound rumbled in his chest. His hands slid to the zipper at the side of her skirt, dragging it down slowly. The fabric pooled at her feet, leaving her in her bra, panties, and heels. She started to turn, but his hand pressed flat against her back, holding her in place.

"Did I tell you to turn?"

"No, sir."

"Then face forward."

She faced the windows, her reflection ghost-like in the glass. Behind her blurred shape, she could see Gabriel's outline, the sharp lines of his suit as he circled her. He stopped behind her again, one hand sliding around to cup her breast through the lace of her bra while the other traced down her stomach.

"You're already wet." His fingers pressed against the damp fabric of her panties. "I can feel you through the silk."

"Gabriel—"

"Quiet." He pinched her nipple through the lace, sending a spark straight to her core. "You'll speak when I tell you to speak."

She bit her lip, holding back the moan that threatened to escape. His fingers pushed past the edge of her panties, sliding through her slick folds, finding her entrance. Two fingers pushed inside without warning, stretching her open.

Nathalie's head fell back against his shoulder, her eyes fluttering closed. His fingers worked in and out slowly, too slowly, curling to find that spot inside her that made her knees weak.

"Look at you," he growled against her throat. "Dripping on my fingers in my office in the middle of the afternoon. What would the board think if they knew what my professional wife was doing right now?"

She couldn't answer, could barely think. His thumb found her clit, pressing tight circles against the swollen bud, and she felt her orgasm building already.

He withdrew his fingers suddenly, leaving her empty and aching. Before she could protest, he'd spun her around to face him, capturing her mouth in a passionate kiss. His tongue pushed past her lips, claiming and tasting every corner of her mouth.

When he finally released her, they were both breathing hard. Gabriel's pupils had turned wide with desire. He gestured toward the desk.

"On top. On your back."

She hopped onto the strong glass surface, the glass cool against her heated skin. Papers scattered beneath her, a contract for the spring line crushed under her shoulder blades. She didn't care. She could only watch as Gabriel unbuttoned his shirt with precision, revealing the muscle beneath.

He didn't bother removing it completely. Just unfastened his trousers and freed himself, his cock jutting forward, hard and ready. But instead of climbing over her, he gestured again.

"Turn over. Hands and knees."

Nathalie flipped herself over, bracing her palms against the desk. Behind her, she felt Gabriel's hands on her hips, positioning her exactly where he wanted her. He pulled her panties down her thighs, leaving them tangled around one ankle.

Then he sat back in his leather chair, his face inches from her exposed core.

"Gabriel, what are you—"

His tongue licked through her folds, and she forgot how to speak. He devoured her from behind, his tongue working her clit, his fingers spreading her open. She dropped to her elbows, her forehead pressed against the cool glass, her hands fisting around scattered documents.

"Oh God. Oh God, I'm going to—"

He pulled away. Again. Left her trembling on the edge.

"On my lap," he commanded, settling deeper into the chair. "Face away from me."

Nathalie understood. She climbed off the desk, her legs unsteady, and positioned herself over him. Her back pressed against his chest as she sank down onto his cock, taking him completely in one smooth motion.

They both groaned at the sensation. He filled her so perfectly like he was made to be inside her. She braced her hands on his thighs, finding her balance, and began to move.

She rode him slowly at first, lifting and lowering herself, feeling every inch of him drag against her inner walls. But Gabriel's patience had clearly run out. His hand fisted in her hair, pulling her head back against his shoulder, forcing her back to arch.

"Faster."

She moved faster. Her thighs burned with the effort, her hips rolling in quick circles, grinding down onto him with each descent. His free hand came around to cup her breast, pinching and pulling at her nipple through the lace.

"That's it." His voice was strained, breathless. "Take what you need."

She did. She rose and fell with increasing desperation, chasing the pleasure that had been building since she'd walked through the door. The room filled with the sounds of their bodies meeting, her wetness coating him, skin against skin.

His hand left her breast and came down hard on her ass.

The crack echoed through the office. Nathalie gasped, her rhythm faltering.

"Keep moving."

She moved. He spanked her again, the sting radiating through her flesh, blending with the pleasure until she couldn't tell where one ended and the other began. Again and again, his palm connected with her heated skin while she rode him with desperation.

"You love this." His grip tightened in her hair, holding her in place. "Being used in my office, being spanked like the desperate little thing you are."

"Yes." The word came out broken. "God, yes."

"Say my name."

"Gabriel."

"Louder."

"Gabriel!"

He yanked her hair harder, exposing her throat. His other hand snaked around to press against her clit, rubbing tight circles against the swollen bud. Her orgasm built like a tidal wave, rising higher and higher with each thrust, each spank, each devastating circle of his fingers.

"Come for me."

She shattered. Her entire body seized, her inner walls clenching around him, her scream filling the office. He followed her over the edge moments later, burying himself deep and spilling inside her with a guttural groan.

They stayed like that for long moments, her collapsed against his chest, both of them gasping for breath. His hand gentled in her hair, stroking rather than pulling. His other arm wrapped around her waist, holding her close.

"Are you alright?"

She laughed, the sound exhausted and utterly satisfied. "Perfect."

He pressed a kiss to her shoulder, then carefully lifted her from his lap. He cleaned her with tissues from his desk, his movements tender now, all the earlier dominance replaced with warmth.

"I think we may need to schedule more afternoon meetings," he murmured, fastening his trousers.

Nathalie looked at the scattered papers, the disheveled desk, and caught her own ruined reflection in the darkened window. Her hair was a mess, her lipstick smeared, her skin flushed and glowing.

"I think you're right, Mr. Agreste."

His lips curved into that familiar, authoritative smile. "Good because I have several more ideas for how to properly utilize this office."

She believed him and she couldn't wait.

> Fashion Week had been a slow torture neither of them had signed up for.
> Three weeks of late nights, early calls, and too many people complaining. Some nights Gabriel came home after 2 a.m. and found Nathalie already asleep, the sheets still smelling like her perfume and nothing else. Other days she was right there in the office, bent over samples or standing too close while he signed contracts, but the second his hand slid up her thigh she'd shake her head. She was too tired, too stressed, not now she always said. They still wanted each other so badly it hurt. The want just kept getting buried under deadlines and designs.
> Tonight was the last big event, an exclusive after-party in a glass penthouse high above the city. Gabriel stood near the windows in a black suit, calmly talking production numbers with a business partner. Completely unaware he was about to get that ruined.
> Nathalie watched him for less than a minute before the last thread of her patience snapped.
> She crossed the room in the burgundy dress that clung to every curve he'd been denied, stopped beside him, and touched his arm with perfect, polite composure.
> "I'm sorry to interrupt," she said, voice smooth enough for the partner. "There's an emergency. I need you. Now."
> Gabriel's eyes cut to hers. He read everything in one look, the flushed cheeks, the tight smile of her mouth, the pure filth already burning behind the calm. He excused himself without another word and let her lead him away.
> She didn't take him somewhere quiet. She shoved him through the nearest glass door onto the private balcony, the night air cool against overheated skin, the city glittering far below like it was watching. The door clicked shut. The second it did, Nathalie pushed him hard against the railing and dropped to her knees.
> "Nathalie—"
> "Shut up." She had his belt open and his cock out in seconds, already thick and heavy in her hand. She licked a long, wet stripe from base to tip, then took him into her mouth like she'd been starving for it. No hesitation just deep and filthy. Her tongue worked the underside while she sucked, eyes watering just enough to look ruined already.

Gabriel's head fell back with a guttural sound. One hand fisted in her hair to hold on. "Fuck —look at you. Weeks of nothing and the second we're alone you're on your knees choking on my cock like a desperate slut."

She pulled off with a wet pop, lips shiny, and looked up at him. "I've been dripping since I watched you walk in. Every time you talked business I kept thinking about how you'd sound if I made you come down my throat in front of all these people."

He hauled her up by the hair, spun her around, and bent her over the railing in one rough motion. Her dress was shoved up to her waist. No underwear. Just bare, soaked cunt on full display for anyone who might look up from the street below.

He growled, dragging two fingers through her folds and finding her dripping. "You're fucking soaked. You've been walking around this party with an empty, needy little pussy all night, haven't you?"

"Yes," she moaned, pushing back against his hand. "Please—just fuck me. I don't care who hears."

He didn't tease. He lined up and slammed into her in one brutal thrust that forced a broken cry from her throat. She was tight from weeks of nothing, clenching around him like she was trying to keep him inside forever. He didn't give her time to adjust. He fucked her hard and deep, the wet slap of skin on skin loud in the open air, one hand fisted in her hair so her back arched, the other gripping her hip hard enough to bruise.

"This what you needed?" he rasped against her ear, slamming into her again and again. "You pull me away from a business meeting so I can rail you over a balcony? Look at you mhm taking every inch like you were made for it."

"Harder," she gasped, already shaking. "Fuck me like you've been dying for it too— Gabriel, use me—"
He did. He pounded into her without mercy, the risk of someone walking out only making both of them hungrier. Every thrust dragged against the spot that made her see stars. She came first with a choked, filthy moan, cunt spasming around his cock so hard he had to grit his teeth not to follow.

He didn't stop.
He kept fucking her through it, relentless, until she was oversensitive and whimpering, then reached around and rubbed her clit in circles.

"Again," he ordered. "You're going to come on my cock one more time before I fill this greedy little cunt up."

"I can't—"
"You can. Be a good girl and soak me."
She did, shaking, crying out, clenching so tightly around him that he finally lost it. He buried himself to the hilt and came with a low, broken growl, pulsing deep inside her in long, heavy spurts while the city glittered beneath them.

They stayed locked together for a long moment, breathing hard, his cock still twitching inside her.
Gabriel's hand stroked slowly down her spine, softer now but still possessive.

"Emergency handled?" he murmured against the back of her neck, voice rough with satisfaction.

Nathalie let out a shaky, filthy little laugh. "For now. But the second we get home, you're on your knees. I want that mouth on me until I decide you've earned the right to come again."

He smiled against her skin, still buried deep, already half-hard from the promise alone.

"Yes, ma'am."

He pulled out carefully, watched his cum start to leak down her thighs, then smoothed her dress back into place like nothing had happened. When he looked at her again there was pure filth and pure devotion.

"We're leaving," he said quietly. "I'm not spending another minute talking about next season when I could be ruining you properly."

She touched the corner of his mouth, thumb brushing the place where her lipstick had smeared.
"Good. Because I've been patient for weeks. Tonight you're going to remember exactly who owns that cock when the door closes."

He kissed her once, slow, filthy, tasting himself on her tongue—and opened the balcony door.

The party was still going. No one had noticed.

But both of them already knew the real event was just getting started.
